

No Blame Approach: Further steps, open questions

Further steps

- How to continue?

Follow-up steps

more meetings with the support group additional support of the affected student additional program for bullying protagonists

Social skills training in classes/ (Cyber)bullying awareness raising training in classes

Even after a successful intervention it is important to keep an eye on the affected student. How is he/she doing? Are things fine? Also, talk to the members of the support group about how they experience the class atmosphere and the position of the affected student. More activities might be needed, e.g. additional support for the affected student, social skills training in class, a buddy program (an older student is the mentor of a younger one) or an additional program for bullying protagonists. Also, a (cyber)bullying awareness raising training for the whole class sensitizes the students to the problem.